10 years ago, just for fun, my friends and I decided that we needed to learn to oil paint. And with a Mom who paints and a Dad who does wood-working including wood duck decoys, it was a matter of time. We found ourselves at diDomizio's Old World Art Center and learned the techniques of the old masters and learned how to make art. I have always had an interest in art but never studied until joining the class. My Mom would teach me tole painting techniques and I would spend time drawing pictures from books or attempting pastels.

While I work full-time, I make time to go to the studio and continue to learn new theories and techniques to get the message across in the painting. I have worked in oils, pastels, and charcoals/pencils to create landscapes and portraits. Italy will always be a favorite subject and photography has become more and more important to me to get the ideas and the images.
